OLD ORCHARD CAMP-MEETING.

Good Templars' Day.

Arrangements have been made to have had yesterday the "grand field day" of the week.
Delegations from all parts of the state were invited. Special arrangements were made for good music. Many prominent speakers were expected, and everything possible was done to make the meeting an hour of the most powerful organization to which the day was devoted. But meetings this year, in this vicinity at least, have had to contend with powers of the air, and this week the contest has been too unequal.
The wind, which was a fair steady breeze in the afternoon and the meetings were of great interest. The prevailing topic of conversation yesterday was the masterly speech of Prof. Foster of the day previous, which was universally declared the best ever delivered at Old Orchard on the question of temperance.

The meetings yesterday commenced at 9 o'clock at the stand—ex-Gov. Perham, G. W.
C. T.—and the exercises opened with a solo singing rendered by Rev. Albert Smith of Northampton, Mass. Rev. O. M. Cousins, the G. W. C.
T., then read from Scripture and prayed.

The Secretary of the Grand Lodge, Geo. E.
O'Brien, of Belfast, then read statistics of the order, which in twenty-five years has spread over the world and numbers over half a million members, of whom sixteen thousand and over 200 lodges are embraced within the Grand Lodge of Maine.

Rev. O. M. Cousins quoted from Oliver and compared the Grand Lodge with Harper's Weekly, which the speaker said, quoted Mr.
Murphy as too lenient on beer drinking. He also told a story of a church in Bradford where the minister with his brethren on temperance and got drunk himself.

Rev. Mr. Twiss of South Windham told the history of different temperance organizations in that village and made interesting comments.
He was followed by Owen B. Chaboureaux and
J. R. Dagobert.

The afternoon meeting was the largest of the week. Ex-Gov. Perham presided, and the religious exercises were conducted by Mr.
Cousins.

Le Forest House of Norway, a member of the Reform Club and Good Templars, represented the Good Templars lodge of that place in a very proper and consistent manner. Compared the struggle of the boys in blue in the late rebellion with the temperance struggle of the boys in blue for protection against King Alcohol.

Judge Kingsbury then introduced. He referred to the magnitude of this temperance question as compared with the other questions before the Grand Lodge, and said that which it is now making. His remarks were freely interspersed with humorous stories.

Mrs. Roberts of Lawrence, Mass., spoke of the evil influence of the license law, and of the large number of licensed drunk shops in Lawrence.

C. A. Farwell of Pittsfield, spoke of the impossibility of Christian character without the virtue of temperance. Urged the ladies to come up to the stand, and to be good causes.

Mr. Burbank of Saco, spoke of the harmony existing between different organizations in this work.

Andrew J. Chase of Portland, Grand Worthy Counselor, investigated the cause of intemperance, and pointed out the cause of the intemperance of the order of Good Templars. Advised all to strive to organize a lodge in their respective towns.

Mrs. Fitzgerald of Brunswick, the Superintendent of the Juvenile Templars, spoke of the interest she felt in Good Templars, and of the good field which it furnished for the labor of women. Spoke of the grand features of the coming generation.

Mr. Pennington, formerly of Maine now of Rhode Island, referred to one phase of the temperance law as yet untouched—the liquor agencies—and condemned them. Spoke of the advantages and benefits to be derived from the temperance law, and of the sympathy which it extended to its members.

THE GREAT WALK.

At the conclusion of Miss von Hillier's walk in this city last week, a number of persons who visited her were surprised at her physical condition. They expected to see her completely broken down, but instead she appeared her usual good health and spirits. Then people concluded that walking wasn't so hard after all, and the next day a large number who were not of that idea repaired to the track to try their own strength. They expected a fair steady breeze in the afternoon and the meetings were of great interest. The prevailing topic of conversation

Old Orchard on the question of temperance.

The meetings yesterday commenced at 9
o'clock at the stand—ex-Gov. Perham, G. W.
C. T.—and the exercises opened with a solo singing rendered by Rev. Albert Smith of Northampton, Mass. Rev. O. M. Cousins, the G. W. C.
T., then read from Scripture and prayed.

The Secretary of the Grand Lodge, Geo. E.
O'Brien, of Belfast, then read statistics of the
over the world and numbers over half a million
members, of whom sixteen thousand and over 200 lodges are embraced within the Grand Lodge of Maine.

Rev. O. M. Cousins quoted from Oliver
and compared the Grand Lodge with Harper's Weekly, which the speaker said, quoted Mr.
Murphy as too lenient on beer drinking. He also told a story of a church in Bradford
where the minister with his brethren on temperance
and got drunk himself.

Rev. Mr. Twiss of South Windham told the history of different temperance organizations
in that village and made interesting comments.
He was followed by Owen B. Chaboureaux and
J. R. Dagobert.

The afternoon meeting was the largest of the week. Ex-Gov. Perham presided, and the religious exercises were conducted by Mr.
Cousins.

Le Forest House of Norway, a member of the Reform Club and Good Templars, represented the Good Templars lodge of that place in a very
proper and consistent manner. Compared the struggle of the boys in blue in the late rebellion with
the temperance struggle of the boys in blue for protection against King Alcohol.

Judge Kingsbury then introduced. He referred to the magnitude of this temperance
question as compared with the other questions
before the Grand Lodge, and said that which it is now making. His remarks were freely interspersed with humorous stories.

Mrs. Roberts of Lawrence, Mass., spoke of the evil influence of the license law, and of the large number of licensed drunk shops in Lawrence.

C. A. Farwell of Pittsfield, spoke of the impossibility of Christian character without the virtue of temperance. Urged the ladies to come up to the stand, and to be good causes.

existing between different organizations in this work.

Andrew J. Chase of Portland, Grand Worthy
Counselor, investigated the cause of intemperance,
and pointed out the cause of the intemperance
of the order of Good Templars. Advised
all to strive to organize a lodge in their respective towns.

Mrs. Fitzgerald of Brunswick, the Superintendent of the Juvenile Templars, spoke of the interest she felt in Good Templars, and of the good field which it furnished for the labor of women. Spoke of the grand features of the coming generation.
